LEARNING BY DOING

Everyone TALKS about it
But at UToledo, we LIVE it

Move ahead with undergraduate research

The Office of Undergraduate Research connects students in ALL majors with opportunities to:

- Learn graduate-level skills
- Participate (even be named) on published research
- Build mentor relationships with leading faculty

Learn beyond the classroom

"As soon as I learned about the Honors College trip to the Galapagos Islands, I knew it was something I wanted to do – and it was affordable!"
